1. No Comment:
You don’t have to talk to police on the streets. If there’s a Stop and Search or if you are arrested, best to stay silent or reply with ‘no comment’. If arrested, say ‘no comment’ in interview until you talk to a good lawyer.

2. No Personal Details
Officers may try to get personal details. You are not legally required to give details, even in a stop and search, unless a specific power is used or a Fixed Penalty Notice is issued.

3. Under What Power?
If police ask you to do something, ask them if you are legally obliged to answer and “under what power”? If you aren’t obliged or they don’t answer, you don’t have to do it.

4. No Duty Solicitor
If arrested, don’t use the solicitor on duty but get a lawyer experienced in protest law – in London, use any of ABA, Binenbaum, FIN or Commons Legal. We also recommend that you phone or inform GBC from the police station with your ‘one call’ – 07546 541 511.

5. No Caution

Police often try to get people to accept a caution, which goes on your criminal record. We recommend not accepting one unless a good lawyer recommends it. If you’re offered one, it’s because the police want you to take it—they are not doing you a favor.
